Introduction

Making Out in Korean introduces a colloquial form of spoken Korean, which you would not learn at any formal language course. It gives you an edge when maneuvering through the ins and outs of everyday life in Korean.

Unlike English, Korean has several speech levels that are formally codified. Age, social standing or the degree of intimacy you have with the person being addressed determines the level of politeness you should adopt. The different speech levels are marked by the verb endings placed at the end of sentences. Needless to say, you are required to use the polite form with strangers, your seniors and to those of a higher social status. However as your relationship with them develops, a more relaxed and casual form of the language may be adopted.

Making Out in Korean presents the intimate and colloquial speech level of Korean that is often used among very close friends including couples. This book contains “street-Korean” in addition to derogatory and vulgar expressions to enrich your spoken Korean!

Apart from the “Curses and Insults” section, any words requiring caution are marked and coupled with explanations to avoid misuse. Although most of this phrase book adopts an intimate and colloquial style of speech, selected expressions are presented in the polite (informal) form, when necessary, and are marked in brackets. The polite (informal) form of Korean is achieved by attaching -yo at the end of intimate speech forms, which usually end in -a or -eo.

Care should be taken not to jump the gun before a relationship has matured. Using an informal or vulgar speech level in the wrong social context would be considered extremely insulting to a Korean person. To be on the safe side, refrain from adopting such levels of speech until the other party initiates it or both parties have reached a mutual agreement to do so.

Basic Grammar

The Korean language follows the word order of Subject-Object-Verb as opposed to the word order (Subject-Verb-Object) of English. Verbs are placed at the end of sentences, a position that reflects its importance in Korean grammar.

I am going to school. hak-kkyo ga. (Statement)
 학교 가.
 Literally means “School go.”

Another salient feature of spoken Korean is that any element of the sentence may be omitted except the verb as long as you can clearly gather from the context what is being talked about. As a result, a single verb can be a complete sentence in Korean as indicated by the third example below.

Go to school! hak-kkyo ga! (Command)
 학교 가.
 Literally means “School go.”

Let's go to school.

학교 가.

Literally means "School go."

hak-kkyo ga. (Suggestion)*hahk-kkyo gah.Are you going?

가?

Literally means "Go?"

ga? (Question)*gah?Going to school! (You're joking!)

학교 가!

hak-kkyo ga. (Exclamation)hahk-kkyo gah.

In Korean, the same sentence structure can be used for both sentences and statements. The following examples illustrate that by merely substituting the question word "where" with "school" changes a question into a declarative statement:

Where are you going?

어디 가?

Literally means "Where go?"

erdi ga? (Question)*erdee gah?I am going to school.

학교 가.

Literally means "School go."

hak-kkyo ga. (Statement)hahk-kkyo gah.

Expressions in the intimate form of speech can be converted into the polite (informal) form by simply adding -yo at the end, which usually end in -a or -eo:

학교 가.

hak-kkyo ga. (Intimate level of speech)hahk-kkyo gah.

Literally means "School go."

학교 가요.

hak-kkyo gayo.

(Informal polite level of speech)

hahk-kkyo gahyo.

Literally means "School go."

Reading Romanized Korean

Two systems are used to show the pronunciation of the Korean phrases in the ordinary English alphabet.

The upper line on the right of the page follows the official Revised Romanization of Korean prepared and authorized by the Korean government in 2000. The letters used in this transcription have to be pronounced in a certain way only: they should not be treated like the letters in English which have different sounds in different words, for example the a in 'apple,' 'father,' 'syllable' and 'date.'

Because it can at first be quite difficult for English speakers to read romanized Korean correctly, an approximate phonetic equivalent, designed to reflect the closest English equivalent to each Korean sound, is given in a second line underneath the official transcription of each phrase. Where necessary, a hyphen (-) is used to mark a syllable boundary so that any confusion in pronunciation is avoided.

Each phrase is also written in Korean script immediately under the English equivalent on the left of the page, so that if you have difficulty in making yourself understood by following the romanized versions you can show the book to the person you're talking to and they will be able to read what you mean.

Consonants

(1) Simple consonants

ㄱ g, k	ㄴ n	ㄷ d, t	ㄹ r, l	ㅁ m	ㅂ b, p
ㅅ s	ㅇ ng	ㅈ j	ㅊ ch	ㅋ k	ㅌ t
ㅍ p	ㅎ h

(2) Double consonants

ㄲ kk	ㄸ tt	ㅃ pp	ㅆ ss	ㅉ jj
-------------	-------------	-------------	-------------	-------------

Most of the consonants are pronounced as in English except the tensed (double) consonants.

Double Consonants

There isn't much problem pronouncing romanized Korean except the tensed (double) consonants that require a relatively strong muscular effort in the vocal organs without the expulsion of air.

English	Korean	Approximate in English
kk	ㄲ	as in "ski," "sky"
tt	ㄸ	as in "steak," "sting"
pp	ㅃ	as in "speak," "spy"
ss	ㅆ	as in "sea," "sir"
jj	ㅉ	as in "bridge," "midget" (similar to a tutting sound in an exhaling way)

Vowels

(1) Simple vowels

ㅏ a	ㅑ eo	ㅓ o	ㅕ u	ㅡ eu	ㅣ i
ㅗ ae	ㅛ e

(2) Diphthongs

ㅕ ya	ㅛ yeo	ㅙ yo	ㅠ yu	ㅞ yae	ㅟ ye
ㅜ wa	ㅠ wae	ㅜ wo	ㅟ we	ㅡ ui	ㅟ oe
ㅟ wi

English	Korean	Approximate in English
a (ah)	ㅏ	as in "father"
eo (er)	ㅑ	as in "turd"
o (aw)	ㅓ	as in "fall"
u (oo)	ㅕ	as in "boo"
eu (oh)	ㅡ	as in "taken"
i (ee)	ㅣ	as in "see"
ae (a)	ㅗ	as in "tad"
e (e)	ㅛ	as in "beg"
oe (we)	ㅟ	as in "welcome"
ya (yah)	ㅕ	as in "yarn"
yeo (yaw)	ㅛ	as in "yonder"
yo (yo)	ㅙ	as in "yogurt" (said with a slight pull)
yu (yu)	ㅠ	as in "yule" (said with a slight pull)
yae (ya)	ㅞ	as in "yak"
ye (ye)	ㅟ	as in "yes"
wa (wah)	ㅜ	as in "wipe" (first vowel sound of the word; rhymes with "bah")
wae (wa)	ㅠ	as in "wax"
wo (wo)	ㅜ	as in "wonderful"
wi (wi)	ㅟ	as in the "weed"
ui (ooe)	ㅡ	this is a combination of 2 sounds u as in "pull" followed by ee as in "see."

The Korean writing system, Han-geul (한글) demands that any written syllable must begin with a consonant sign. This means that even when a syllable begins with a vowel sound (the syllable contains no spoken consonants) you have to start the syllable with the zero consonant 0, which has no sound.

a (ah) 아	u (oo) 우	ae (a) 애
eo (er) 어	eu (oh) 으	e (e) 에
o (aw) 오	i (ee) 이	oe (we) 외

POLITE GREETINGS

How are you?

ahn-nyawng-hah-seyo?

I'm fine, thanks. And you?
네, 안녕하세요?

ne, ahn-nyawng-hah-seyo?

Annyeonghaseyo? 안녕하세요? is a greeting that asks about the other person's well-being or good health. This expression can be used at any time of the day as "Good morning," "Good afternoon," "Good evening," "Hi," "Hello," or "How's it going?" The common response is simply ne, annyeonghaseyo? 네, 안녕하세요?.
